HUGH WILLIAMS, EDITOR.

PROGRESS TELEPHONE No. 17.

FRIDAY, MARCH 8, 1901.

REMEMBER the farmers' Institute, Saturday March 16th, and attend.

AFTER a month's recess, the Tennessee Legislature will reconvene next Monday.

THE President has renominated the members of his former Cabinet and the nominations were confirmed by the Senate.

THE inaugural addresses of President McKinley and Vice-President Roosevelt will be found on the first page of to-day's BULLETIN.

THE farmers of Hardeman County have gone to work with a will, and if they fail to make a good crop this year it will be on account of the seasons, not from lack of energy. Quite a number who have heretofore rented and worked on shares have recently purchased small farms and are improving them. Labor-saving machinery is used to a greater extent than ever before. These facts alone are sufficient to prove that our farmers are progressive and prosperous.

IT is a draw as to who made the greatest exhibition of bad taste—the Confederate Bivouacs objecting to the invitation extended to President McKinley to be present at the Confederate reunion to be held in Memphis, on the grounds of being a Federal soldier; or Admiral Sampson, who opposed the promotion of Gunner Morgan, because of obscure parentage. Certainly both acts are contrary to the true American spirit. Brave soldiers have no ill feeling toward each other, no matter which side they espoused, conceding that on both sides honesty and sincerity guided; and in these days and times, men stand upon their merit, no matter of how lowly birth.

THE Tipton County Democrat says: "The scheme to detach Hardeman from the Tenth Congressional District is not, in our opinion, a good one. The Tenth district is nominally 54 per cent Republican. Hardeman is the only county in the district which has, practically, a solid white, or Democratic, vote. While it makes no particular difference now, there may come a time when a Democratic member from this district would be especially desirable. Without Hardeman the district would nominally be at least 75 per cent Republican, and in case of a contest this fact, regardless of the vote, would be used as evidence to oust the Democrat. These facts, it would seem, are worthy of consideration."

As a rule, those who attend Presidential inaugurations are divided into two classes—the wealthy, whose object is sight-seeing, and the office-seeker. Of course, those who live in the neighborhood of the national capital can always be depended upon to swell the crowd. Last Monday, at the inauguration of President McKinley for the second term, the papers estimate the number of visitors at 40,000. When Mr. Cleveland was inaugurated in 1885, the first democratic President in 28 years, over 100,000 made the pilgrimage to Washington to witness the event. The difference in numbers is easily accounted for—Mr. McKinley had no pie to distribute. Mr. Cleveland did have—hence it will be seen that the attendance upon Presidential inaugurations is largely governed by existing political conditions.

NATIONAL STATESMEN FROM MEMPHIS.

Memphis Scimitar, Saturday evening.

Next Monday will bring about many changes in the halls of the national Congress, but there will be few that will be of less interest than those from Tennessee.

Congressman E. W. Carmack, that brilliant son of the Volunteer State who has so ably represented the Tenth District in the lower branch of Congress, succeeds Hon. Thomas B. Turley as United States Senator, while Hon. M. R. Patterson, of Memphis, in turn succeeds Congressman Carmack. Senator Turley retires of his own accord, and the modest manner in which he declined to stand for re-election has been the subject of comment not only in his own State, but in others. While in the Senate as the successor to the late Isham G. Harris he has always been found on the right side of the great public questions, and during his short career has made a reputation of which any man may well feel proud.

The next United States Senator, Edward W. Carmack, is well known to Tennesseans. His meteoric rise from newspaper editor to the highest position in the gift of the people of his State is well known. His service as a member of the Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth Congresses is fresh in the mind of the people, and his attitude upon the political questions of the day well known.

While the House of Representatives will lose a valuable member in the "promotion" of Senator Carmack, it will gain one of Tennessee's most brilliant young men, M. R. Patterson, Congressman-elect from this district. Ham Patterson is well known in West Tennessee as a lawyer and orator of marked ability. Mr. Patterson is a son of Col. Josiah Patterson, was born June 7, 1861, and came to Memphis while a mere lad. He attended school at the Christian Brothers' College, in this city, later graduating from the Vanderbilt University law department. While a student at the university he won laurels as an orator, receiving several handsome medals. He was honored with a legislative nomination by the Shelby county Democrats in 1884, and was elected as Attorney General of Shelby county in 1894. As Attorney General he served with credit to himself and Shelby county until September 15, 1900, when he resigned. On May 22, 1900, Mr. Patterson was nominated for Congress by the Democratic convention, and elected in November. Congressman Patterson is a member of the law firm of Gantt & Patterson, is a Mason of high standing and belongs to the Knights of Pythias.

Haywood Farmers.

BROWNSVILLE, March 4.—An interesting meeting of the Haywood County Farmers' Institute was held in the Circuit Court room Saturday. W. L. Richardson, Chairman, called the meeting to order. The following recommendation was adopted:

A statute providing for farmers' institutes and appropriation for this maintenance three thousand dollars per annum. A statute appropriating to the use of the Bureau of Agriculture the surplus derived from the tax on fertilizers, after reimbursing the State for expenditures made in behalf of the bureau. A statute making it a misdemeanor for any person or persons to hunt, net or trap any kind of game on the premises of another without first obtaining the written consent of the owner of the land and giving the Grand Jury powers in cases of the violation of this statute. That the law restraining all kind of stock from running at large now applying to counties of 50,000 or more be so amended as to apply to the whole State.

A statute providing for the transfer of the office of Live Stock Commissioner from the State Board of Health to the Bureau of Agriculture. A statute prohibiting the entry into the State of live stock to be used for dairy or breeding purposes, with a clean bill of health to be shown, nothing contained therein to interfere with state or national quarantine law. A statute establishing an experiment station in West Tennessee and appropriating $5,000 per annum for this purpose and its maintenance. A statute to secure and purify field and garden seed. A statute providing for a new road law or the amendment of the present law so as to make it more effective.

GEN. N. B. FORREST.

From Review of Reviews, March 1901.

Bishop Gailor, of Tennessee, contributes to the Sewanee Review for January a very readable sketch of the military career of Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, the Confederate cavalry leader, of whom Gen. Sherman once wrote: "After all, I think Forrest was the most remarkable man our Civil War produced on either side."

Forrest's first engagement at Sacramento, Ky., illustrated the tactics that he followed with such marked success throughout the war—dismissing about one-third of his men in front as skirmishers, and then attacking with the others in two divisions on flank and rear.

Passing over the surrender of Fort Donelson, to which Forrest refused to be a party and which Bishop Gailor characterizes as "disgraceful," the next important action in which Forrest had a part was Shiloh, where he captured a battery and on the retreat to Corinth he "saved the Confederate army from destruction by checking Sherman's advance."

Forrest's subsequent exploits are thus related by Bishop Gailor:

"Within three weeks, however, he was again ready for action, and made a raid into Middle Tennessee that astounded his enemies, and began the marvelous career of audacity and success that ended only with the Civil War. With 1,500 men he swooped upon the fortifications at Murfreesboro, destroyed the railway station and the forts, took 1,200 prisoners, including two brigadier-generals, Crittenden and Duffield, destroyed $700,000 worth of stores, captured 60 wagons, 500 mules and horses, one battery of artillery, and escaped in safety, with the loss of but sixteen killed and 25 wounded. The country swarmed with Federal troops, and Forrest's escape reads like a chapter in fiction. General Buell wrote: 'Our guards are gathered up by Forrest as easily as he would herd cattle. Why don't you do something?' " "After checking Buell's advance upon Bragg, who had marched into Kentucky, Forrest was again relieved of his command (November 1862), and was ordered back to Tennessee to raise and equip another, if he could.

"By December 1 a new brigade of 2,000 men had gathered round him at Columbia; but they had virtually no arms, ammunition, or other equipment, and the only source of supply was the enemy's garrisons. Forrest accordingly ventured to cross the Tennessee River, though it was patrolled by gunboats, and marched with his small brigade into West Tennessee in the face of more than 12,000 Federal troops. He eluded pursuit, captured Colonel Ingalls and his command near Jackson, captured the garrison at Forked Deer Creek, then captured Trenton and its garrison, and again Union City with its garrison, and destroyed immense quantities of stores. Being surrounded finally by three brigades, he attacked one after the other and made his escape in safety, taking with him 500 recruits, full supplies of arms, ammunition, horses and clothes for his men, together with 5 pieces of artillery, 11 cannons, 38 wagons and teams, and 1,500 prisoners."

In his account of Forrest's raid into West Tennessee, in 1863, Bishop Gailor quotes the words of a Northern correspondent, who wrote:

"In the face of 10,000 Federal troops, Forrest, with less than 4,000, has marched right through the Sixteenth Army Corps, and miles from Memphis, carried off 100 wagons, 200 cattle, 3,000 mules, destroyed several railroads and many towns."

In his successful attack on Gen. William S. Smith, Forrest stated that he had 2,000 men engaged against 7,000.

Summarizing General Forrest's personal characteristics, Bishop Gailor says:

"He was a man of immense physical strength and size, and as resolute and audacious in personal encounters as in open battle. His temper was terrific when roused, and his language was often violent and profane, but never vulgar nor obscene. He detested uncleanness, as he despised wanton, cruelty and oppression. In the midst of a battle, when his own life was in peril, he was known to rescue a woman and a child from danger and carry them to a place of safety. While he thrashed a scout with hickory whips for giving him second hand information, he degraded one of his best officers for trifling with the affections of a woman. He was unlearned, but not illiterate. A pen, he said once, reminded him of a snake, and his spelling was consistently wrong, but his natural eloquence could move his troops to enthusiasm. He did not know the first principles of the drill, being astonished at the effect of a trumpet call upon disciplined soldiers, and yet in his general plan of battle he instinctively adopted the marred tactics of Napoleon. He exercised an authority as a general that was absolutely intolerant of the slightest variation or disobedience, and yet he was the genial companion of his subordinates and was foremost in exposing himself in every battle. He had 20 horses killed under him and with his own hand slew 30 men."

Strikes A Rich Find.

"I was troubled for several years with chronic indigestion and nervous debility," writes F. J. Green, of Lancaster, N. H., "no remedy helped me until I began using Electric Bitters, which did me more good than all the medicines I ever used. They have also kept my wife in excellent health for years. She says Electric Bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a grand tonic and invigorator for weak, run down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by W. J. Cox.

A Good Cough Medicine for Children

"I have no hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says E. P. Moran, a well known and popular doctor of Petersburg, Va. "We have given it to our children when troubled with bad coughs, also whooping cough, and it has always given perfect satisfaction. It was recommended to me by a druggist as the best cough medicine for children as it contained no opium or other harmful drug." Sold by W. J. Cox, Bolivar; J. W. Nuckolls, Toone.

Remarkable Cures of Rheumatism.

From the Yulicrator, Rutherfordton, N. C. The editor of the Yulicrator has had occasion to test the efficacy of Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice with the most remarkable results in each case. First, with rheumatism in the shoulder from which he suffered excruciating pain for ten days, which was relieved with two applications of Pain Balm, rubbing the parts afflicted and realizing instant benefit and entire relief in a short time. Second, in rheumatism in thigh joint, almost prostrating him with severe pain, which was relieved by two applications, rubbing with the liniment on retiring at night, and getting up free from pain. For sale by W. J. Cox, Bolivar; J. W. Nuckolls, Toone.

An Honest Medicine for LaGrippe.

George W. Waitt, of South Gardner, Me., says: "I have had the worst cough, cold, chills and grip and have taken lots of trash of no account but profit to the vendor. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the only thing that has done any good whatever. I have used one bottle of it and the chills, cold and grip have all left me. I congratulate the manufacturers of an honest medicine." For sale by W. J. Cox, Bolivar; J. W. Nuckolls, Toone.

Headache often results from a disordered condition of the stomach and constipation of the bowels. A dose or two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will correct those disorders and cure the headache. Sold by W. J. Cox, Bolivar; J. W. Nuckolls, Toone.
